KERO HEATERS

They may not be in everyones memory, but 50 years ago these kerosene heaters were still commonplace in many houses without a wood stove.

At the time kero (paraffin) was much cheaper than petrol, and was also used to run stationary engines.

Shown are the American made Perfection model 510, the Aladdin, and the English made 525 and 56 Valor models.

These smelly firetraps were eventually replaced by electric bar heaters etc and now reverse cycle airconditioning.

They are displayed with other old domestic equipment in the House.
