GYMPIE STATION BELL

The railway display was one of the museum exhibits that was recently moved to higher ground when the river was rising.

Among the collection is this bell that was used at Gympie railway station to signal the departure of the train.

The cast brass bell is about 28 cm high and 16 cm in diameter, with a wooden handle. The bell was kept on this pine and silky oak stand.

This exhibit is on display at the old Monkland Station.
